CONSTITUTIONAL.

An item appears in an exchange intimating that the French Minister of the Interior "has instructed all public officials who are candidates for election to the Chamber of Deputies to resign their posts at once." No servants of the state, assuming the Minister's orders to be obeyed, will be permitted to have a hand in shaping the laws of the country. France, by this fiat of the Minister, will be practically under the operation of an "Independence of Parliament" act. There is perhaps no nation which has taken bigger strides in popularizing her constitution during the past fifteen years than France has done. The French Minister evidently means to stand or fall on the merits of his measures and not on the number of mercenary votes of government employees he can command in the Chamber of Deputies. By adopting this policy, France will be in line with the advanced constitutions of Great Britain and the United States. In these countries, public servants acting in the capacity of legislators is an impossibility. And it would be a curious comment on their boasted free institutions if it were otherwise. Measures of legislation carried by the votes of persons dependant in any way upon the good graces of the administration, are not of a character to command the respect of the people. Laws so enacted can only be regarded as schemes foisted upon the nation by the operation of a mild system of bribery. It would be inconsistent with the principles of human nature to expect a man holding office under the government to vote in parliament otherwise than in the interests of his employers.

The Hawaiian Kingdom is supposed to be under a free legislature. The fact is that the free legislature is but a myth. The legislative body itself is, of course, an entity, but its independence is a nonentity. Persons holding office under government, form a large part of the membership of both houses. Government measures pass the legislature, and that is as likely to mean that they are acceptable to members acting under explicit orders which they dare not disobey, as that they are the fruits of the united wisdom of the representatives of the people. Legislation, under such circumstances, is no better than a burlesque and a farce. One of the most conspicuous defects in the constitution of the Kingdom is the composition of its legislature. And no improvement in the administration of its affairs need be expected until the employees of Ministers are weeded out of both the House of Nobles and the House of Representatives. This reform can be consummated in a most summary and satisfactory manner by the electors themselves. In nominating candidates for next legislature, all the constituencies should adopt the French Minister's method. Let every office holder offering his patriotic services—at a good salary—be given to understand that henceforth machine legislation cannot be tolerated; and that the country's representatives must vote standing in their own shoes, and not in those supplied by Cabinet Ministers.

STILL PURSUING.

The Advertiser is still pursuing, but failing to achieve, the purpose of making the BULLETIN appear inconsistent upon the Chinese question. Throughout, the course of this paper thereupon has been clear and straightforward. Possibly the Planters' Company may have meant to deceive the public by the resolution on immigration passed by it. We, however, have more respect for the intelligence of its majority than to suspect them of supposing that the resolution as amended could either mislead the public, or bear the slightest pressure upon the Government in the direction of inducing a relaxation of restrictions upon Chinese immigration. As we regarded Mr. Davies's amendment to Mr. Horner's resolution, it was intended simply to kill that attempted pronunciamento. The object was easier attained in that way, perhaps, than by laying siege to the resolution in a wordy discussion. It was a mere question of methods, and nobody who knows anything about deliberative assemblies can honestly quarrel with the mode of action adopted.

Our contemporary is, however, pursuing us in another sense. It is following the lead of the BULLETIN in opposing Chinese immigration. The leading article of the Advertiser this morning is indited upon the lines of previous discussions of the question in these columns. Moreover, it contains, in particular, the identical arguments used in a BULLETIN editorial that induced an attack upon us in that strident style of invective which always signalizes the retreat of our contemporary. However, let that pass. We cordially welcome our contemporary to the ranks of those who are making a stand in this kingdom for civilization.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Sir Richard Sutton, owner of the defeated yacht, is said to pronounce the "G" hard in "Genesta." He doubtless pronounced it hard when she was beaten.

It is a subject of regretful remark that the one foreign corps of Honolulu cannot be kept up to a respectable numerical standard, when the main expenses are met from the public treasury.

The Gazette is a little too fast in charging the BULLETIN with showing the white feather in Police Court reports, upon the strength of a case lately docketed. We simply adopted a course followed in many other cases, of awaiting the actual trial.

The American Dairyman gives the cream of civil service principles when it says, "It is manifestly common-sense that a public servant who is secure in his position so long as he is honest and faithful is more likely to be honest and faithful than if he is sure of being turned out at the expiration of the term for which he was appointed."

Mr. Cleveland would seem to be in danger of being wounded in the house of his friends, by some of his appointees to commanding positions betraying the confidence reposed in them as upholders of civil service reform. An instance of the above statement is the case of the Collector of the port of New York, whose appointment was well spoken of on account of his reform proclivities, but who, no sooner than he was comfortably ensconced in his position, began to turn out eminently efficient officers to make room for his political favorites. At least, that is the Mugwumpery of it.

An American paper, in an article on the late international yacht race, says, "The friendly contest between the Genesta and the Puritan was most agreeable because it was a contest of gentlemen." There is a touchstone in that remark, which, if brought into contact with sporting affairs in this country would save them from such disagreeable episodes as have sometimes characterized them. Besides, "gentlemanly" in the true sense of the term would preclude the disgraces of jockeying and the demoralizations of gambling in our manly sports.

Commenting on the appointment of a negro who was born a slave, to the Consulship of Liberia, by President Cleveland, who "belongs to the party which, a few years since, was absolutely controlled by the power of slavery," Harper's Weekly, from which the foregoing quotation is made, says, "In view of such facts, and of all the other signs around us, it is hopeless and puerile to insist that nothing is changed, that our politics are still those of 1850 and 1856, and to suppose that intelligent Americans, lovers of liberty and of fair play, are to be startled and controlled by the cry that we are still practically fighting with slavery."

THIS Company, while thanking the public for its generous support, are still able to furnish first-class teams. The steady advancement of this Company since its organization, two years ago, has convinced us that persons who drive their own teams not only make steady competent drivers, but, as a rule, are not likely to charge more than legal rates. Any passenger overcharged by any of our drivers will, on application to our office, have the overcharge promptly returned. The object of the United Carriage Company is to supply the public with good teams at legitimate rates of fare, and hope by so doing to merit, in the future, the same liberal patronage that we have received in the past.
